EARLY LITERACY TIP

Sing, Play, Read, Write, Talk

There are five early literacy skills. They are sing, play, read, write, and talk. All these skills help your child as they prepare to learn to read. There are a variety of different ways you can implement these practices in your daily activities to develop these practices with your little one.

A great resource with more information about each of the five early literacy skills is the Colorado Libraries for Early Literacy (CLEL) website. CLEL provides information about each early literacy skill. CLEL reviews new picture books that feature early literacy and creates an award list each year!

BOOK CORNER

King of the Dump-Tim Wynne-Jones

King of the Dump is a charming story about what happens when children begin to outgrow their toys. Teddy and his Dad are going to the dump to get rid of some toys that Teddy no longer can play with. A great read as you clean out spaces to talk about passing on toys to the next child who would love them.
